“[On the “Breaking Bread” program]: The thought of being invited to the home, the most personal space a human can come to own, of one of my professors was reason enough for me to become a Tiger.”

JESUS – Sunrise, Fla.

“The Block Plan enables me to study abroad even though I will be playing on the basketball team and the season cuts across the first and second semesters. No other college provides that opportunity.”

LUKE – Berkeley, Calif.

16 reasons why your class of '16 classmates have already enrolled at CC

“I want to be surrounded by what I am experiencing at the moment and not be distracted by other classes and assignments, I want to have options and flexibility in my education. I want to become close with my professors and my peers. All of these dreams for my education are made true by the Block Plan.”

BARRETT – Louisville, Ky.

“When I visited campus I was overwhelmed by the relaxed and positive energy that flowed throughout the community. I watched as kids sat outside in the golden sunshine of early October, chatting about class work and friends and philosophy and sports. Everyone seemed to be grounded and enthusiastic about what they were doing.”

ABIGAYLE – Belmont, Mass.

“I am a science guy down to my DNA. I live and breathe biochemistry and physics ... I used to watch Bill Nye when I was little. I could finally delve into the deeper mechanics of a science at CC and learn everything about it without the distractions of other classes.”

KIAN – Seattle, Wash.

“For me, the biggest benefit of the Block Plan is that it allows students to develop an unexpected passion for something.”

SOYEON – Northfield, Ill.

“A new environment, a club girls hockey team, a chance to explore the outdoors, the Block Plan — suddenly it all made perfect sense. Stepping foot on the campus of Colorado College was like reading the first page of a really good book.”

HANNAH – Norwich, Vt.

“People there live to their own beat, and are proud of it.”

ROBERT – Seattle, Wash.

“I love how the curriculum twists the traditional liberal arts education and allows for students to focus on their passions as well as gain knowledge in other areas of study. I think that the skills gained from this rapid learning style are invaluable in a world where adaptability is now the key to success in the international work place.”

MAKENNA – Boulder, Colo.

“Everyone I talked with was intelligent, motivated, and active, both physically and mentally. Students struck me in a way that students at no other school had. These were the types of people I want to spend my four years in college with.”

SUMNER – Wilmington, Del.

“As I left that day, I could picture myself walking through campus with a cup of coffee in my hands rushing home to escape the chilly, fall air. I could see myself surrounded by books and fellow students in the field working on an assignment. I could see myself with new friends and classmates getting ready for a volunteer trip abroad.”

ERIN – St. John's, Fla.

“My visit was when I became hooked on becoming a future CC Tiger. The school spirit at soccer, hockey, and volleyball games is unbelievable. I was able to watch several games, and I loved seeing how everyone at CC is supportive of one another. The community is so welcoming and tight knit.”

EMILY – The Woodlands, Tex.

“As soon as I opened the admission page on CC's website, a statement struck me — ‘YOU'RE MORE THAN A TEST SCORE!’ This statement touched my heart. I want a college where I am not just treated as a score and where I can have the freedom to design my own curriculum and follow my life values.”

JIUMEI – Shenzhen, China
